

What people are saying about Simpol

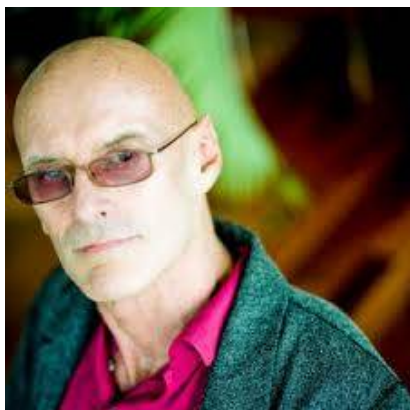

José Ramos-Horta. President of East Timor. Nobel Peace Prize Laureat

"I am pleased to confirm to you my interest in endorsing the Simpol campaign and to be as active in its support as I can."

Noam Chomsky. Professor (MIT), political activist, author

"It's ambitious and provocative. Can it work? Certainly worth a serious try."

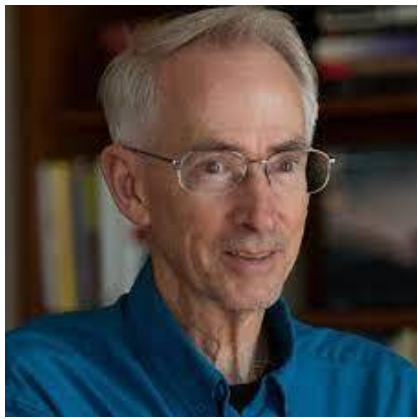

Ken Wilber. American philosopher, author and founder of Integral Theory.

"The central idea of Simpol is very powerful; that is, the notion of how to link votes in one country with votes in another - how to link political action in one country with action in another. International competition is built-in to the nation-state system at its current level of development and so the issue is not environmental concerns, but how to get humans to agree on environmental concerns. This is really fascinating and very hopeful. In my opinion this is the crucial issue for the 21st century."

Scilla Elworthy. Founder, Oxford Research Group

"Until I read your clear analysis, I hadn't realised just how much Destructive Global Competition is central to governments' problems."

David Sloan Wilson. Author of "Does Altruism Exist?" and President of the Evolution Institute

"It's a pleasure to read a book that captures the modern evolutionary worldview so well and your actual solution is very clever. We even share an awareness of the need for a psychological therapeutic process and a global policy-making process."

Helena Norberg-Hodge. Director of the International Society for Ecology & Culture

"Your idea for a simultaneous policy is excellent Let's hope that people start to listen to this important message."

Diana Schumacher. Former President, The Schumacher Society

"The adoption of a Simultaneous Policy would eliminate the worst aspects of destructive competition from the economic system whilst promoting a recognition of the interdependence of each and all."
